

To Whom It May Concern:

I'm upset the Sinclair Broadcasting Company is being allowed to force their stations to air the documentary Stolen Honor. It seems they are supposed to serve the public interest and this does not do that. It is a clear example of the dangers of media consolidation.

Instead of something produced at "News Central" far away, it's more important that we see real people from our own communities and more substantive news about issues that matter. Or if they are allowed to air it they should also have to air something like Farenheight 911 near the same time.

Sinclair's actions show why we need to strengthen media ownership rules, not weaken them. They show why the license renewal process needs to involve more than a returned postcard. Thank you.
